

The most important factors that lead to students learning mathematics we found were; the ability to link content to real world and tangible applications, prior knowledge, and the teacher's attitude towards math.